London, February 4.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland, one from Flanders, and another from France.

Centa, January 14.

DON George Prospero de Norbone, Engineer General, being arrived here, has viewed the Fortifications which the King of Spain caused to be made soon after his Army had driven away the Infidels from their Camp, since when 300 Men have been daily employed in perfecting them, in order to render them impregnable against the Moors, who for 30 Years past have been besieging this Place, but have never been able to become Masters of any Part of the Fortifications. On the 11th Instant at Night, 24 Grenadiers were sent out to reconnoitre the Enemy's Line of Communication, reaching from their Right to their Left; the Grenadiers advanced up to their Works without being perceived by the Moors, and firing in among them, put the Workmen to Flight, and those also who sustained them; after which, the Detachment having viewed the Works, returned back without any Loss. The next Night the Governour of this City ordered out a Detachment of 86 Grenadiers, commanded by Captain Don de la Sierra, followed by 40 Pioneers, and sustained by the rest of the Grenadiers of this Garrison, and all the Artillery; they marched up to the Enemy's new Works, and attacked them very bravely; the Moors were obliged after some Resistance to quit their Trenches, which our Men levelled afterwards without the least Obstruction offered by the Enemy.
